EMPLOYEE SURVEY

Question 1: Which survey questions did respondents agree with or disagree with most?

Highest levels of agreement

- Question 1: "I know what is expected of me at work" received the highest number of strongly agree responses (846), indicating that employees generally have clear expectations about their roles and responsibilities.
- Question 4: "My supervisor, or someone at work, seems to care about me as a person" received 699 strongly agree responses, suggesting positive relationships between employees and their supervisors.
- Question 5: "The mission or purpose of our organization makes me feel my job is important" recorded 578 strongly agree responses, indicating that many employees understand and value the organization's mission.

Highest levels of disagreement

- Question 3: "In the last seven days, I have received recognition or praise for doing good work" received the highest number of strongly disagree responses (189), highlighting a significant gap in employee recognition.
- Question 8: "My supervisor holds employees accountable for performance" received 151 strongly disagree responses, suggesting inconsistencies in performance management practices.
- Question 6: "I have a best friend at work" recorded 137 strongly disagree responses, indicating weaker social connections and lower levels of workplace belonging.
- Question 7: "This last year, I have had opportunities at work to learn and grow" received 120 strongly disagree responses, pointing to concerns about career development opportunities.

EMPLOYEE SURVEY

Question 2: Do you see any patterns or trends by department or role?

Trends by role

- Employee sentiment becomes more positive as organizational level increases.
- Directors reported the highest positive response rate (87%), followed by Managers and Supervisors (83%).
- Staff members reported the lowest positive response rate (74%) and the highest negative response rate (26%).

This suggests a perception gap between leadership and frontline employees. Leaders may view the work environment more positively than staff who experience day-to-day operational challenges.

Trends by department

- Planning and Public Works recorded the highest number of positive responses, indicating stronger employee engagement within that department.
- Several departments, including Economic Development, Emergency Management, Facilities Management, and the Medical Examiner's Office, recorded relatively low response volumes and lower positive sentiment, which may require further investigation.
- Variation across departments suggests that employee experiences are not consistent throughout the organization.

These differences may be influenced by factors such as workload, leadership effectiveness, communication practices, resource availability, and opportunities for development.

Question 3: As an employer, what steps might you take to improve employee satisfaction based on the survey results?

1. Strengthen employee recognition programs by encouraging managers to provide frequent, timely, and meaningful feedback.
2. Improve career development opportunities through training, mentoring, coaching, and clearly defined career pathways.
3. Equip managers with leadership training focused on communication, employee engagement, performance management, and recognition.
4. Promote stronger workplace relationships by organizing team-building activities, cross-functional projects, and employee networking opportunities.

EMPLOYEE SURVEY

5. Ensure consistent accountability practices by establishing clear performance expectations and regular performance discussions.
6. Conduct department-specific follow-up sessions to understand the unique challenges faced by teams with lower engagement scores.
7. Increase communication between leadership and staff through town halls, listening sessions, and regular feedback channels.
8. Implement regular pulse surveys to monitor progress and measure the effectiveness of improvement initiatives.

Additional Insights

- The survey results indicate that employees understand their roles and connect with the organization's mission; however, they feel less supported in terms of recognition, development, and workplace relationships.
- Positive relationships with supervisors are a strength that can be leveraged to improve engagement in other areas.
- The disparity between leadership and staff perceptions suggests a need for more direct communication and increased visibility of employee concerns at higher organizational levels.
- Overall job satisfaction remains relatively strong, but sustaining this level of satisfaction will require focused efforts on recognition, growth opportunities, and inclusivity.
- Departments with higher engagement scores can serve as benchmarks for identifying and sharing best practices across the organization.

EMPLOYEE SURVEY

Additional Recommendations

- Develop a formal employee recognition framework that includes peer-to-peer recognition and manager-led appreciation programs.
 - Create individualized development plans for employees to support career growth and succession planning.
 - Share best practices from high-performing departments across the organization.
 - Establish employee resource groups or social initiatives to strengthen workplace connections and inclusion.
 - Set measurable targets for improving employee engagement scores and assign accountability for achieving them.
 - Communicate survey findings transparently and provide regular updates on actions taken in response to employee feedback.
 - Repeat the survey annually and compare results over time to identify trends and evaluate the impact of improvement initiatives.
